BARBARESCO DOCG
GAIA PRINCIPE
2017

Quite sweet red-berry character, together with forest floor, wild onion and tasty, clay-like minerals that go on to coat the firm tannins on the palate, creating a dense, velvety texture. Persistent fruit. Lots going on now and lots of potential. Give it a couple of years. Best from 2023.

GAIA PRINCIPE
2018

Dried cherries and berries here with a little hint of potential truffle magic that immediately arouses interest on the nose. Medium-bodied palate with rather less interest, at least for now, with firm and quite dry tannins that are combatting the fruit. Should even out with some bottle age. Will that truffle note come out? Try from 2024.

BARBARESCO DOCG
FAUSONI RISERVA
2015

Delightful aromas of bright, spicy red fruit follow through to a medium-bodied palate where all is delicacy and finesse. The tannins have given way to the bright, orange-tinged fruit and the finish is long and true, with just a reminder of firm tannin right at the end. Really drinkable now, but will continue to age nicely.

I like the spicy, almost leathery edge to the dried red-cherry aromas. Hints of cumin and scorched orange rind, too. Medium-bodied with firm tannins and an intense bead of bright, spicy fruit. A bit lean and mean, but I appreciate the focus and intensity here. Should blossom with more time. Try from 2025.

BARBARESCO DOCG
GALLINA
2017

Dried cherries, lightly spicy bark and minerals on the nose. Medium-bodied with firm, powerful tannins which, though not particularly aggressive or chewy, create a rather dry void on the palate. Time may readdress the balance. Try from 2024.
